LTC needs to reach out to public: City

Transit Commission. But bus chief says they already have an existing communications strategy

MIKE DONACHIE
mike.donachie@metronews.ca

Speak out, London Transit Commission has been told, and maybe you'll get more money.

A working group looking at the LTC's future has told the city's civic works committee that the bus company needs to come up with a communications strategy to reach out to the public and build support for more investment.

In turn, that will lead to political support and, if all goes well, better bus services.

But LTC general manager Larry Ducharme says there's already a strategy in place. The problem, he said, is that city councillors don't know about it.

Monday's civic works committee agenda arrived with the working group's recommendation. The group advised that "the LTC be encouraged to develop a communications strategy to build the case for the economic rationale of increased funding."

"We have one," Ducharme said, referring to a strategy. "I think the gist is that they may not be aware of it. I believe that could be the case."

The request to develop a communications strategy comes from a group that includes city councillor members and the public. Coun. Paul Hubert, a group member, was the originator of the request.

"Sometimes when you talk about getting to industrial areas, people don't understand the challenges that people are having, getting to work," Hubert said.

So to help the general public understand the issues, LTC should communicate better, he said. Public opinion feeds political will, and that in turn leads to more funding.

"We're going to the province for money; we're going to the feds for money, but there needs to be the economic rationale for increasing the funding," Hubert said.

"We subsidize LTC at a lower per-capita rate than many municipalities. If you're going to ask for more money, you need to make the case for it."

Ducharme insisted LTC already speaks to the city and agreed to a formal communications strategy last fall.

The strategy includes things like public drop-in sessions.

Harvey Filger resignation. London's development czar leaves letter for councillors

mike.donachie@metronews.ca

Harvey Filger may be gone from city hall, but his name is still on everyone's lips.

"Food for thought" is how one councillor has summed up the parting shot left by the director of corporate investments and partnerships, whose last day on the job was Friday.

Filger, credited with facilitating $750 million in economic development projects in London, left a letter behind.

According to sources at city hall, it wasn't pleasant reading, but, because it's been deemed a human resources issue mired in legal restrictions, it can't be released publicly.

The letter was sent to city

Food for thought

"I've been asking for a reorganization of how we deliver economic development services. I've been saying that until my throat hurts."

Coun. Joe Swan, echoing the resignation letter left by Harvey Filger treasurer Martin Hayward and a number of councillors. It is highly critical of the direction the city is taking on economic development.

"He's provided a letter of resignation that is food for thought," said Coun. Joe Swan, who, as chair of the investment and economic prosperity committee, worked closely with Filger. "It's not so much a question of the individuals involved.

"For me, it's how can we do economic development better, and not be working against each other, but work together.

"I think Harvey was trying to indicate to councillors in his resignation that we needed to get our act together, and he's right."

Swan is among those frustrated by what he calls "silos" — public agencies that work separately on bringing in jobs.

He wants a single strategy with a single budget, calling it "101 economic development."

Prescription drug drop-off nets big haul

London police Const. Ken Steeves said Saturday's Prescription Drop-Off event was a resounding success, with about 130 people dropping off almost 100 kilograms of pills and other medication collected at White Oaks Mall, Cherryhill Mall and Loblaw's on Richmond Street.

Police worked with London-Middlesex-Elgin Crimestoppers and Westervelt College students to help area residents dispose of unwanted and unused medication.

The goal of the event is to keep prescription medication out of the hands of kids, who are increasingly using it themselves.

Steeves said the oldest medication they received was dated 1978. What's more, it came from a pharmacy inside Cherryhill Mall, the same place it was returned to nearly four decades later.

Elsewhere

Woodstock police also participated in the drop-off.

- Nearly 820 grams of drugs were disposed of.

"Many potentially dangerous drugs were brought in, which include oxycocet, oxycodone, hydromorphone, hydrocone, Tylenol 3, lorazepam and percocet, just to name a few," Steeves said.

Needles were also turned in. "The misuse and abuse of prescription medication has become a public safety issue for communities and police services across the country," Steeves added.

The initiative was sponsored by the Ontario Association of Chiefs of Police.

Talks. Province needs to increase mental health funding, official says

More needs to be done to protect the most vulnerable.

That the message Don Seymour, CEO of the Canadian Mental Health Association Middlesex, came away with after a big meeting of the minds in London.

Representatives from nearly 200 mental health agencies across the province were in the city last week to talk about best practices and, among other things, what can be done to "change legislation and how to lobby the government."

One of the top priorities of the day, Seymour said, is funding, which is nothing new, but rather a constant concern for everyone involved in the mental health field.

"The fire marshal is imposing new regulations on group homes. That means we're going to have to find hundreds of millions of dollars for these group homes to put sprinklers in them," he said. "That's something where the money's not there, the fire marshal says you have to do it and that'll impact services to find the money to deal with the legislation."

Pile on the fact there are thousands of families in the province who've been on waiting lists for these homes for years and the need for big dollars makes more sense.

"I believe the measure of a society is how you treat your most vulnerable," he said. "We've got families that are struggling, dropping their children off at agencies and not picking them up because they're burned out. We know times are tough, but we're really letting some vulnerable people down and we can do better."

Not giving up. Stubborn flu going down with a fight

Flu season is winding down, but two weeks into May, it can't yet be considered over.

The Middlesex-London Health Unit said 13 people were diagnosed with influenza in the week of May 5-11.

That's down from 17 new cases reported the previous week.

Five people were hospitalized and one person, previously diagnosed, died.

Sixteen people known to have the flu have died in the London area since September 2013 among the 396 confirmed cases.

Health unit officials have said this flu season has lasted longer than most.

Festival of Trees. Library keeps encouraging children to read

It was Beatlemania for books, with hundreds of screaming kids and a group of bemused but delighted authors.

The Festival of Trees brought more than 1,500 students to the Western Fair District Monday for an un-putdownable literary experience.

It was the first time it had come to the city, and the children of London didn't let anyone down with their enthusiasm. As the four-hour event began, they yelled welcomes for the authors at the tops of their lungs.

"The point is, reading is fun," said Shelagh Paterson, executive director of the Ontario Library Association. "It's encouraging and engaging children to really enjoy reading."

Downtown roads paving the way for Memorial Cup tournament

Disruptions. Some roads have been closed in advance

mike.donachie@metronews.ca

The big event is almost here, and it's already important to plan ahead if you're heading downtown.

There were some snarl-ups Monday as tents started to go up at King and Talbot streets, which will be the focal point of Fanfest events surrounding the Memorial Cup hockey tournament (Friday to May 25).

The Dundas-to-King block on Talbot is already closed. Traffic's being diverted around, and that will be extended soon.

On Thursday only, the closure will stretch from York to Dundas for the arrival of the Memorial Cup trophy.

Also closed already is Dundas Street from Ridout to Talbot.

The city also reminded people Monday that municipal parking lot eight at Budweiser Gardens is closed for public parking through May 28. It already has sponsors' tents set up for hospitality.

A limited amount of accessible parking will be made available in a parking lot at 75 King St., the city said.

For up-to-date postings of street closures, visit apps.london.ca/rightofway.

The closures are already affecting buses, with LTC warning people there will be detours for routes 2, 5, 7, 8, 9, 11, 12, 19, 20 and 23.

Cops, EMS prepare for crowds and road closures

London first responders will be dealing with more than just large crowds during the course of the Memorial Cup.

When called to emergencies elsewhere, they're also going to have to navigate their way through multiple road closures near Budweiser Gardens.

Sections of King, Dundas and York streets will be closed either some or all of the time beginning at the end of this week.

London police Const. Ken Steeves said officers will simply have to find detours if necessary.

"If anything happens, we'll treat it the same as any other emergency and do our best to get where it is that needs to be tended to," he said.

A larger police presence can be expected in the area for crowd control, but that's the norm when there are a lot of people in a small area.

"We're certainly not anticipating any issues. It'll be like the (World Figure Skating) event," Steeves said.

Middlesex-London EMS deputy chief of operations John Prno said there have been meetings to discuss strategy.

A final decision hasn't been made, but there's been no order yet to increase staffing levels.

Big welcome. Military helicopter, motorcade and horses to escort Cup

In addition to the Knights, London sent a second team to Saskatoon to view the Memorial Cup celebrations last May.

That team involved the key organizers of this year's upcoming event.

London Knights' director of marketing Geoffrey Hare was part of that second team and the group quickly identified something that was lacking.

The arrival of the Memorial Cup itself was an underplayed part of the celebrations.

"(The Cup arrival) has always been done nicely in a small setting, based on how it worked for their markets — which is great — but we wanted to take it and amplify it to be much more, almost like a massive event within an event," Hare said Monday.

Well, they have accomplished what they set out to do. The Memorial Cup will arrive in London in a very large, public way Thursday.

The Cup will be brought to the city via a Canadian military helicopter and will make its first stop at Wolseley Barracks at 1 p.m.

Security restrictions will not allow the public to view the Cup there, but it will then proceed by a motorcade to Victoria Park where Londoners are invited.

A team of the famous Budweiser Clydesdale horses will escort the Cup to the Fanfest site on Talbot Street between Dundas and King, and there will be a series of speakers helping to make the Cup feel welcome.

"The hardest thing was definitely securing a military tie-in of this nature, with a helicopter and everything; and secondly securing the Clydesdales with their scheduling," Hare said. DAVE LANGFORD/METRO

Police force diversity officer running for Libs

He's not the first London police officer to take a leave from the force to join an amazing race. But if Marcel Marcellin wins, chances are his career as a cop will come to an end.

Marcellin, a sergeant and the police department's diversity officer, has entered the June 12 provincial election race as a Liberal in the riding of London-Fanshawe.

Unlike Const. Jet Black, who took a leave from his duties to compete in 'The Amazing Race,' Marcellin knows he might not be going back.

It's a tall ambition against the NDP's incumbent Teresa Armstrong and Tory challenger Chris Robson. But, Marcellin said he mulled the decision over extensively and is ready to run.

"It took a long time for me to decide exactly what I wanted to do because I had to take a lot of things into consideration," he said. "My family is really important to me, and I liked what I did when I was a police officer, so to make that change took a lot of thought."

He's been heavily involved in community service in his role as the diversity officer and said this is the logical next chapter.

"I think the type of work that I did in diversity translates really well into the work an MPP would do in terms of advocating for your community and representing your constituents," the 43-year-old said.

Flying the Liberal colours is natural because he is a liberal, but Marcellin stressed that he appreciates some principles and values from all parties.

"I believe there are some NDP principles that do align with some of the things that I believe, but at my core I'm a Liberal," he said. SCOTT TAYLOR/METRO

Hydro. Election promises include better rates, dropping tax

Ontario's opposition parties promised help Monday to deal with soaring electricity bills, which they blamed on the Liberals' energy policies, as the campaign for the June 12 election entered its second week.

The Liberals are particularly vulnerable on the energy file after cancelling two gas plants prior to the last election in 2011 at a cost to taxpayers of up to $1.1 billion, and with a planned 33 per cent hike in electricity bills over the next three years.

The Tories also targeted generous subsidies under the Liberals' Green Energy Act in their pledge to keep the rate hikes lower than forecast.

"We need to end these expensive subsidies for the wind and solar projects that are driving our rates higher and higher still," said Progressive Conservative Leader Tim Hudak. "It doesn't make any sense to add on more expensive power we don't need."

Hudak also promised to reduce the number of government electricity agencies, and said he'd cut the "bloated" bureaucracy at Hydro One and Ontario Power Generation to help get electricity rates low enough to generate 40,000 new jobs.

New Democrat Leader Andrea Horwath promised to scrap the provincial portion of HST on hydro bills if she becomes premier.

The NDP promise would save homeowners about $120 a year, she said.

"Instead of making life affordable, the Liberals decided to add an unfair tax on top of the highest electricity rates in the country," said Horwath.

"We're going to take it off and make life affordable for families."

Premier Kathleen Wynne spent the first part of her day on the radio, defending the decisions to cancel planned gas plants in Oakville and Mississauga, which the opposition parties called an expensive Liberal seat saver program.

Wynne said former premier Dalton McGuinty did "what he believed was right," but added that she has tried to rectify mistakes that she believes were made. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fighting back

Premier Kathleen Wynne stepped up her attacks against Progressive Conservative Leader Tim Hudak Monday, calling his plan for the province a "frightening" one that would push Ontario back towards a recession.

- At a campaign stop in Vaughan, north of Toronto, Wynne hammered away at Hudak's election campaign pledge to shrink the public sector by 100,000 jobs.

- "His approach would sacrifice our fragile economic recovery and would plunge us back toward recession. That may be his approach but it's not mine and it is not ours," she said.

Human rights crisis. UN official slams Canada's record on First Nations

A UN rapporteur is at a loss to explain how a prosperous and sophisticated country like Canada has come to have on its hands a First Nations human-rights problem that has reached "crisis proportions."

James Anaya's report picks a fight with the federal government on several fronts — education, energy projects on reserves and missing or murdered aboriginal women, to name a few — and is sure to amplify tensions between Canada's First Nations and a federal government they so thoroughly distrust.

"It is difficult to reconcile Canada's well-developed legal framework and general prosperity with the human-rights problems faced by indigenous peoples in Canada that have reached crisis proportions in many respects," writes Anaya, the UN's special rapporteur on indigenous rights.

"Moreover, the relationship between the federal government and indigenous peoples is strained, perhaps even more so than when the previous special rapporteur visited Canada in 2003."

Aboriginal Affairs Minister Bernard Valcourt acknowledged more work needs to be done, but highlighted steps the government has taken to give First Nations access to housing, education and matrimonial rights.

"Our government is proud of the effective and incremental steps taken in partnership with aboriginal communities. We are committed to continuing to work with our partners to make significant progress in improving the lives of aboriginal people in Canada," Valcourt said in a statement.

Lac-Mégantic. Quebec town plans to rebuild the Musi-Café, destroyed in 2013's train disaster, as partly a gathering place, partly a memorial

Time has passed in Lac-Mégantic, but the anxiety has not.

Ten months after the train disaster that killed 47 people in the eastern Quebec town, residents should be gearing up for a bustling tourist season.

Instead, they are still finding their feet after the tragedy and hoping that a construction project begun last week will return some spirit to a town that has known only ghosts since July 6, 2013, when a runaway train loaded with crude oil jumped the tracks and wiped out a swath of the downtown.

The project that is being unveiled Tuesday — the reconstruction of the Musi-Café, a popular local bar — is both emotional and practical.

Practical because the destruction of the rallying point for local revellers, karaoke singers and visiting musical acts has left Lac-Mégantic without a nightlife or place to celebrate moments of joy.

It is charged with emotion because the bar that was located next to the train tracks on the main downtown strip was where about 30 of the 47 victims were enjoying drinks, music and friends when the train flipped, caught fire and exploded.

Just a few things were recovered from the tragedy: a German beer sign, a few beer kegs, a metal drink shaker and a patio umbrella that had been stored in the bar's basement. But the most touching item bar owner Yannick Gagné now has in his possession is the

Nigeria. Schoolgirls won't be released until detained fighters are freed: Extremist

A Nigerian Islamic extremist leader says nearly 300 abducted schoolgirls will not be seen again until the government frees his detained fighters.

A new video from Nigeria's Boko Haram terrorist network received Monday purports to show some of the girls and young women chanting Quranic verses in Arabic. The barefoot girls look frightened and sit huddled together wearing grey Muslim veils. Some Christians among them say they have converted to Islam.

It is the first video evi-

"I swear to almighty Allah you will not see them again until you release our people that you have captured," leader Abubakar Shekau says as he cradles an assault rifle in the video.

It is not known how many suspected Boko Haram members are detained by security forces. Hundreds were killed by soldiers last month when Shekau's fighters stormed the military's main northeastern barracks in Maiduguri city, the birthplace of Boko Haram.

Drag queen. European opinion divided after Austrian victory at music competition

It's the beard that divided a continent. The victory of whiskered drag queen Conchita Wurst in the Eurovision Song Contest had celebrities from Nigella Lawson to Russell Brand posting bearded selfies on the Internet in tribute — and Russian men snapping clean-shaven pictures in protest.

For millions of viewers, the annual Eurovision show is a cheesy music competition renowned for its camp, kitsch and electro beats. But the nation-based contest is also a potent mix of patriotism and politics in bubblegum wrapping.

cheekily described Monday as the "Furred World War."

The statuesque brunette with the soaring voice of a diva and a full dark beard called her first-place finish in Saturday's contest a victory for tolerance and respect. Austrian President Heinz Fischer said it was "not just a victory for Austria, but above all for diversity and tolerance in Europe."

But Russian Deputy Prime Minister Dmitry Rogozin tweeted that Eurovision had shown

the true face of European integration: "a bearded girl." On social media, a variety of Russian men posted shaving-foam selfies alongside slogans such as "Get shaved, don't be like a woman!"

Pro-Kremlin legislator Olga Batalina — deputy head of the family and maternity issues committee of the lower house of Russia's parliament — said Wurst's victory showed "it's not enough to have a talent and a good voice to win Eurovision; you also need to reject your nature, identity and traditions." She chalked the win up to "aggressive and persistent" gay propaganda.

That may sound like a lot of rhetoric over a talent show but Eurovision has always been more than a simple singing contest. Founded in 1956, the competition pits European nations against one another in pursuit of pop music glory.

But it is more generally loved, and mocked, for its

Not just a song contest

Politics, both personal and international, has often intruded on Eurovision.

- Transsexual Israeli singer Dana International sparked protests by ultra-Orthodox Jews in her homeland in 1998 but went on to win.
- Georgia pulled out in 2009 after its song We Don't Wanna Put In — a dig at Russian leader Vladimir Putin — was judged excessively political.

parade of cheesy tunes from quirky performers. The live telecast is watched by some 180 million people and has a particularly strong gay following. It also faces perennial accusations of regional block-voting and geopolitical games.

Elections postponed

Voting delay in South Sudan

South Sudan's government said Monday that elections scheduled for next year would be postponed for two or three years in order to tackle the issue of reconciliation among its people.

South Sudan was plunged into massive violence in December when President Salva Kiir accused his former vice-president, Riek Machar, of trying to oust him in a coup.

Crew members hailed as heroes

Three crew members on the doomed South Korean ferry were designated as martyrs on Monday for giving their lives to save others as the ship was sinking nearly a month ago.

The heroic actions of the three who died contrast sharply with the accusations against other crew, 15 of whom have been arrested on suspicion of negligence, and accusations against the ferry owner.

Pro-Moscow insurgents claim eastern autonomy

Pro-Moscow insurgents in eastern Ukraine declared independence Monday and sought to join Russia, undermining Ukraine's May 25 presidential election, strengthening the Kremlin's hand and putting pressure on Kyiv to hold talks with the separatists.

Russia signalled it has no intention of subsuming eastern Ukraine the way it annexed Crimea in March. Instead, Moscow is pushing to include eastern regions in negotiations on Ukraine's future — suggesting that Russia prefers a political, not military, solution to its worst standoff with the West since the Cold War.

Such talks are central to a potential path toward peace outlined Monday by the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe. The plan laid out by Swiss President Didier Burkhalter calls on all sides to refrain from violence and urges immediate amnesty, talks on decentralization and the status of the Russian language.

That's a key complaint of the armed insurgents who have seized power in eastern regions and clashed with government troops and police. But it's up to the Ukrainian government to take the next step.

Acting Prime Minister Arseniy Yatsenyuk pledged Monday to hold talks with those in Ukraine's east. But he gave no specifics and did not address Sunday's vote or the declarations of independence by the Donetsk and Luhansk regions.

With a national presidential election scheduled in 13 days, the regions of Donetsk and Luhansk declared independence Monday, and those in Donetsk even asked to join neighbouring Russia. The sprawling areas along Russia's border, home to about 6.6 million people, form Ukraine's industrial heartland.

The interim government in Kyiv had been hoping the presidential vote would unify the country behind a new, democratically chosen leadership. Ukraine's crisis could grow worse if regions start rejecting the presidential vote. Dozens have been reported killed since Ukrainian forces began trying to retake some eastern cities.

Ads. Frozen food makers hope to warm consumers up to products with campaign

Frozen food makers planned to launch their first national TV ad in the U.S. in defence of their products on Tuesday as in a fight to boost slipping sales.

The ad will include the tag line "Frozen: How Fresh Stays Fresh," and is intended to address negative misconceptions people have about frozen foods.

The push comes as frozen food sales have been hurt by consumers moving to food they feel is fresh or natural.

The push is being funded by companies including General Mills, H.J. Heinz, Jasper Wyman & Son, Kellogg,

Prosthetic hands get a modern update

DEKA Arm System.

The latest twist on the 1912 invention lets amputees open envelopes, pick up eggs

Modern life is quickly becoming stranger, and for amputees, better than science fiction.

Take the revolutionary new prosthetic limb that looks, and is, completely cutting edge.

The limb is called the DEKA Arm System — and it was developed in New Hampshire by serial inventor/genius Dean Kamen and his team. The thing even has fingernails.

Technology for prosthetic hands hasn't had too many radical advances. Until now, most have been variations on the theme of the 1912 invention of the clasping hook prosthetic.

The DEKA represents a mind-boggling advancement.

Wireless sensors placed under the foot of the user allow them to control six different grips. And that means, as you'll see in the demonstration (scan the Metro AR photo to see), that a user with one hand can now perform previously difficult tasks like opening an envelope.

The impetus for the invention was a DARPA (Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency) initiative called The Revolutionizing Prosthetics Program. Its goal is "so service members with arm loss may one day have the option of choosing to return to duty. Additionally, the dexterous hand capabilities developed under the program have already been applied to small robotic systems used in manipulating unexploded ordnance, thus keeping soldiers out of situations that have led to limb loss."

The new system has just been approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, meaning that it can be manufactured, sold. It's powerful enough to hold a hand drill, while sensitive enough to allow a user to pick up items as delicate as eggs. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

ME TARZAN, YOU BREADWINNER

Earlier this month, Fox News hosted a discussion about whether it's problematic for a woman to make more money than her husband. Apparently, segment host Clayton Morris believes female breadwinners are causing serious marital issues among heterosexual couples.

"Isn't there some sort of biological, innate need for men to be the caveman?" he asked a panel of guests.

A genuinely concerned Morris then went on to argue that men should be responsible for "going out and bringing home the dinner" and it is emasculating for a husband to be out-earned by his wife.

I understand that no one has ever accused the talking heads at Fox of being overly feminist, but this news segment seemed particularly chauvinistic, even for them.

It's hard to believe that people are still clinging to these outdated gender roles. Hosting a televised debate about how "Alpha women" are undermining their husbands and contributing to some sort of imagined societal breakdown seems like something that might have happened in 1954, not 2014.

Are we really supposed to believe that modern men are so fragile and insecure? A 2013 Pew Research Study found that almost a quarter of married mothers in the U.S. earn more than their husbands, which means there must be a lot of bruised male egos out there, according to Morris's caveman logic.

In my opinion, women who are the primary income earners in a relationship are about as "problematic" as husbands who change diapers or do the laundry.

Children are incredibly draining on all of your resources — time, energy and definitely money — and nobody should be criticized for contributing to the family finances.

A man's self-esteem might be closely linked to his career, but so is mine.

The women I know are far more likely to find self-fulfillment by succeeding in a lucrative career than perfecting their ability to bake a cake or be a "good wife" in the traditional, Fox News kind of way.

Raising a family is a joint effort. Married partners are playing on the same team and men and women shouldn't be competing over their paycheques.

There are so many different types of households and expecting the partner with the most testosterone to fulfill the role of "provider" at all times is a completely archaic notion.

Female breadwinners aren't an issue; sexist news anchors who broadcast their patriarchal opinions and disprove of women with high-paying jobs are the real problem in this scenario.

Men should be proud to be coupled up with a successful partner, not worrying about how their wife's salary impacts their own masculine identity.

WE ACT: CANADA DOES GOOD

Stories from hospital hallways

Each month, we profile a Canadian who's up to a whole lot of good. Here's one we'd like you to meet:

Who: Jackie Kinder, community volunteer with Childcan, London.

What: Fundraising and organizing community events to help support the families of young people diagnosed with cancer.

Why: To provide the families with the financial and community support they need to focus on their children.

Jackie met 14-year-old Stephanie Simmons, a three-time brain tumour survivor, when she began volunteering with Childcan. "She's my hero," says Jackie. "Knowing what she went through, and knowing that through it all she was so brave, so concerned with helping other children, that's what hooked me." Since then, Jackie has taken a leading role fundraising for Childcan, participating in the Inside Ride cycling event and the National Day of Action for kids with cancer at the CN Tower.

What motivated you to get involved with families dealing with childhood cancer?

"You don't leave a child alone in the hospital — you're there for the long haul and it's incredibly demanding on the family. When families come into the hospital, Childcan has people there right away to offer support. We bring them into the Childcan family, and I fundraise to help with gas, cafeteria vouchers, parking, and credit card bills. The financial hardships are major — but help is always there."

You've spent your life working with young people, first as a teacher and now as a volunteer. What advice do you have for them?

"Take the time to find and develop your passion for a cause. I've met some wonderful volunteers and they are all happier for the work they do. They've learned that happiness doesn't mean all that you own — it's about giving back to other people. It's something I learned from Stephanie: It's the feeling you get doing something worthwhile for other people in your community that keeps us going."

Every year, the city of Hamburg celebrates its harbour's birthday with a massive bash along the Elbe. Drawing more than one million people, the harbour party features vessel parades, something called a tugboat ballet and the much more humble-sounding dragon boat race.

But, this is a party after all. And what party is complete without music? Enter the enormous cruise ship MSC Magnifica — launched from this very harbour in 2010 — and its bone-rattling, horn-fired rendition of Seven Nation Army.

Her

Director. Spike Jonze

Stars. Joaquin Phoenix, Scarlett Johansson

Most sci-fi films make a human/machine love connection seem perverse or at least far out, yet Spike Jonze's Her treats it as a mild novelty.

Set about five years in the future in techno-fabulous L.A., it's nominally a simple sci-fi romance of a man, played by Joaquin Phoenix, falling in love with a machine, voiced by Scarlett Johansson.

There's much more going on than this, of course, as you'd expect from the director who brought us the layered head-spinners Being John Malkovich, Adaptation and Where the Wild Things Are.

Jonze is really interested in the difficulty of making and maintaining emotional and intellectual ties, no matter whether the heart is made of flesh or silicon.

Extras include several making-of featurettes.

Stalingrad

Director. Fedor Bondarchuk

Stars. Thomas Kretschmann

Directed by Putin loyalist Fedor Bondarchuk, Stalingrad seeks to depict exactly why the 1942 Nazi siege of the Volga River city, now called Volgograd, is known as "the bloodiest battle in human history."

Early scenes of soldiers as human fireballs, charging through hellish conditions as they struggle to protect the Motherland, fulfil the understandable Russian imperative to dramatize the Stalingrad confrontation as a turning moment in the national struggle during World War II.

Stalingrad largely succeeds in sensory terms but doesn't fare so well in dramatic ones.

Extras include an English dub and a making-of featurette. PETER HOWELL

St. Vincent wants all of your mind this summer

Indie musical landscape. Singer

Annie Clark comes into her own, creating a live show unlike any other St. Vincent concert

Metro World News in Boston

Just because St. Vincent's summer itinerary is packed with more than a dozen festival dates on four continents doesn't mean that Annie Clark is scaling back the theatrics of the St. Vincent concert experience.

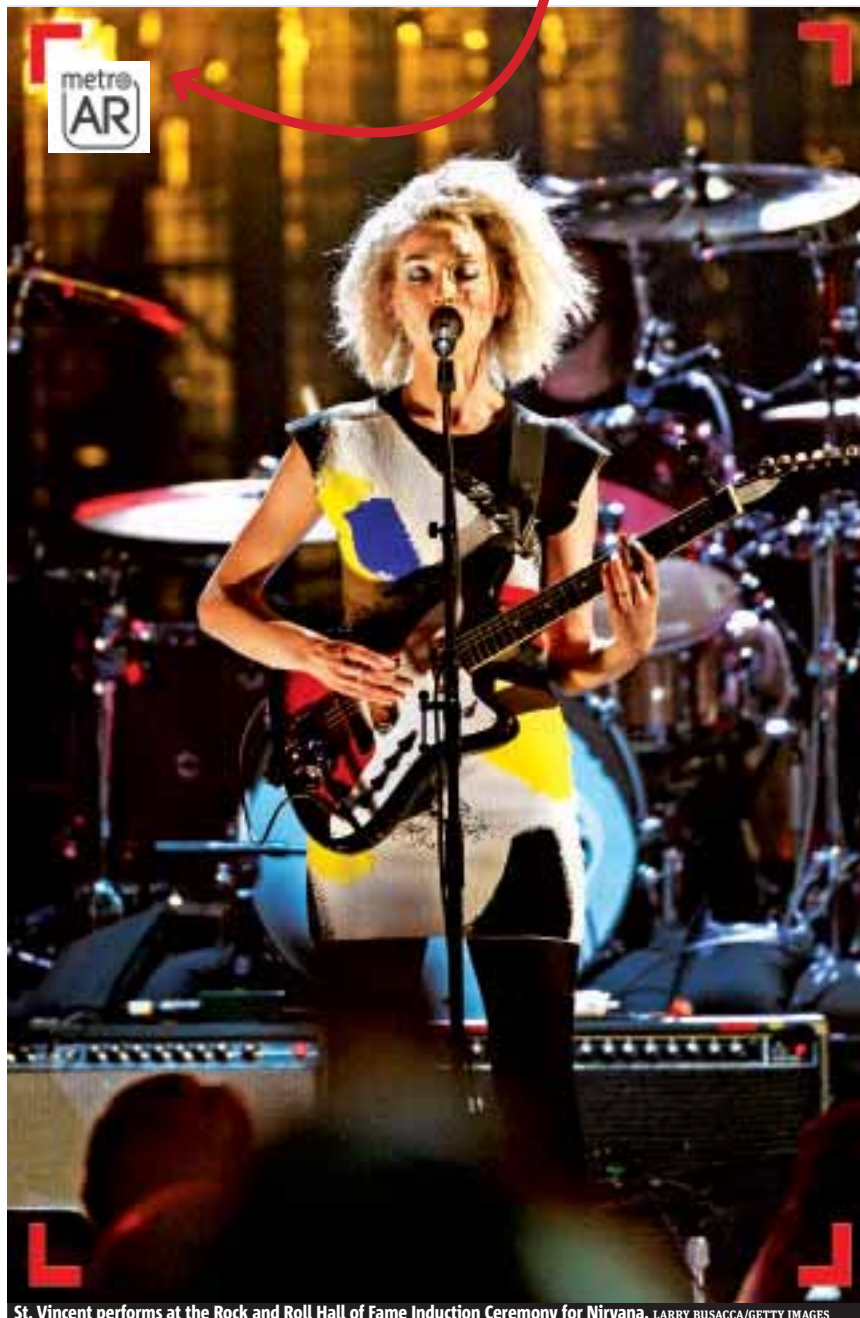

The singer and guitarist will still force herself down a giant set of pink stairs, writhe around against a storm of strobe lights and eventually command the procession, purposefully poised like a cross, from an oversized pink throne.

"We've worked really hard on this strange fever dream of a show, bringing it to life," says Clark, "so it's important that people get the whole experience, even if it's at a festival."

That "strange fever dream of a show," along with the self-titled fifth St. Vincent album, may be the most definitive statement from any artist this year. From Clark's fat guitar leads to her strange and simple lyrics — any of which can be pulled out to illustrate what St. Vincent is all about in 2014 — it feels like the artist has truly discovered her identity.

"I'll always be evolving and be restless and wanting to move violently into the future," says Clark of arriving at something that could be considered iconic, "but I was reading Miles Davis's autobiography and it was saying how the hardest thing about being a musician is to sound like yourself. I can hear one note of Miles or Coltrane and know that it's them and it's the world that they have painstakingly created to be unmistakable. I just thought that this record for me was something where I had successfully created a landscape that was my own."

This landscape includes Clark's stylized lavender/gray old lady hair, of which she says: "Everyone is really obsessed with being young and youth culture and this sort of erroneous idea that things are the best when you are young, and I am young, but I wanted to see what it would look like to go in the opposite direction." And this landscape also includes conscious choreography in the live show, the likes of which hasn't been seen on a St. Vincent tour before. Clark says she was inspired by doing an album and tour with David Byrne, whose live show included an eight-piece brass band moving around the stage and creating what Clark says was "this whole other level of drama and whimsy and symbolic subconscious meaning that the audience can pick up on."

"I wanted to create a real experience for people, especially in this day and age where we are kind of obsessed with capturing moments at the expense of living them," she says. "I wanted to encourage people as much as possible to be present and be so engrossed in the show that they are not tempted to check their text messages."

Angel Olsen gets personal

Lonely love songs. The emotionally charged singer relies only on herself as a songwriter, and the result is beautifully intimate

PAT HEALY

Metro World News in Boston

When Angel Olsen was working on her second studio album, Burn Your Fire For No Witness, which came out in February, she says she frequently found herself adhering to the whole For No Witness idea.

"It was all written in the same period, so whenever inspiration came to me, I would stop what I was doing because I could, because I was working for myself," she says. "So it was like, 'I can go home now — instead of this party — and write all of these things!'"

Wait, so she would literally leave parties?

"I remember weird ex-

Angel Olsen's Burn Your Fire For No Witness is out now on Jagjaguwar. CONTRIBUTED amples," she confirms. "I wrote Iota when it was the middle of summer and I was having kind of a weird day, and my friends had this family picnic at the park and I left. At the time, we lived in Chicago and we had access to this place that had a rooftop. I went up there and had a beer and a guitar. It was just me by myself and I recorded [it] on my phone."

The resulting album includes the sort of confessional musings that might occur in conversation between close friends a few beers deep. Her vocals and lyrics are equally intimate.

"Just listening back to stuff of mine, it's like, 'OK, I guess I'm pretty obsessed with the idea of death and being alone and losing people,' but it's also about finding people," she says. "I feel like it's something that we all think about all the time, but it's not something we all talk about. I don't know if people get anything from it, but I'm not trying to create a kind of cathartic experience for anyone; it just happens to be the things I write about."

Olsen says the way she writes music has changed, because the way she listens to music has changed.

"I would listen to these songs and be like, 'Why are these people always talking about love?' They're just so disappointed and so lonely, it's ridiculous," she says. "And then I would listen to it again, and the more you live, the more that these simple thoughts cut deeper. You have more experiences with people and more experiences in general, with your friendships changing; I think that I've developed a different perspective on writing songs on stuff like that and embracing it. I think that's why I tend to obsess over it."

Mad Men's ad guru steps into the director's chair with God's Pocket

Interview. John Slattery's dark comedy about a South Philadelphia truck thief features Philip Seymour Hoffman in one of his last roles

MATT PRIGGE

Metro World News in New York City

John Slattery has spent much of his career playing authority figures, so it makes sense that he would one day become one. Since 2010, the actor has directed five episodes of Mad Men, all while continuing the role of quip-heavy, silver fox Roger Sterling. Now he's made his feature debut, the very different God's Pocket. It's an adaptation of Pete Dexter's gritty South Philadelphia comic drama about a truck thief (Philip Seymour Hoffman, in one of his last roles) trying to get the money to bury his murdered stepson.

When did you know you wanted to direct?

I don't know when it fully formed as an idea, but I would stand on film sets and have my own opinions, and generally keep them to myself. And then I read this book and it seemed like a movie to me. It took another 10 years to get it fully realized. The idea had time to gestate.

And the visual style is very different from Mad Men.

If you look at Peter Yates, here's a guy who directed The Dresser and The Friends of Eddie Coyle. If you looked at those two movies, I wonder if you'd be able to determine who directed them. The style is determined by the narrative, by the world the story lives in. At least to me. So Mad Men exists in a different world than does God's Pocket, so by necessity, it looks different.

It also neither romanticizes nor judges the denizens of the neighbourhood.

No one in the place feels sorry for themselves. It isn't the prettiest place on earth, but it isn't the worst. And it isn't without hope. No one walks around hanging their head, thinking how difficult life is. They just get on with it, with a sense of humour.

This wasn't shot in Philadelphia. Did you spend some time there?

I visited those neighbourhoods, including the one that was called Devil's Pocket. But it wasn't necessarily the same visually as it once was. We tried to shoot in Philadelphia, but we couldn't afford it, tax credit-wise, accommodations-wise. So we shot it in Yonkers, New York. It's a great-looking city, though.

Philip Seymour Hoffman was offered the journalist, ultimately played by Richard Jenkins, first. Why the switch? He asked to play Mickey. I offered him the part of Richard Shellburn, and he said, "I like the script, but I want to play Mickey."

Was there a reason?

He didn't really say why. He said later that he was drawn to the simple humanity of the character. I think they all have humanity, at different levels or different kinds. Maybe it was something he hadn't played before. I don't know. He obviously had an emotional connection to the character, which is everything.

He was a producer on this film. What was he like?

He came with ideas, he was inclusive and he put people at ease. He could be intimidating — he's Philip Seymour Hoffman. People would walk in a little nervous at working with him, and he would put them at ease. He was a very smart guy. He knew everything that was happening, knew which takes were better. He was very involved.

John Slattery says God's Pocket was a 10-year project in the making. GETTY IMAGES

Justin Bieber GETTY IMAGES

Hoop screams: Bieber gets booed at basketball game

Justin Bieber isn't faring well in the court of public opinion, if his attendance at a Los Angeles Clippers game Sunday is any indication. The troubled Canadian pop star showed up court-side with his mother, Pattie Mallette, to celebrate Mother's Day watching game four of the NBA playoffs, and the other fans in attendance apparently didn't think that was a great idea, according to E! News. "The entire place booed him when Staples Center cameras put him on the Jumbotron," a source says.

George Clooney GETTY IMAGES

You are Clooney-ly invited to mingle with models rather than mama

Woof, I don't envy George Clooney's friends. They had a terrible choice to make on Sunday: Spend the day with their moms for Mother's Day, or slip away to attend George Clooney and Amal Alamuddin's engagement party. On the one hand, a glittering group of A-listers; on the other, your mother realizing you'd rather hang out with George Clooney than her. Among those who chose the Cloon were supermodel Cindy Crawford, who co-hosted the event at her Malibu restaurant Café Habana, according to the Daily Mail. Crawford is a longtime Clooney pal and she and her husband Rande Gerber often double-date with Clooney and his arm candy du jour. Other guests included Bono, who could be a friend of bride or groom — he shares Clooney's passion for human rights, and Alamuddin, of course, is a human rights lawyer.

Community's cast of comedians. HANDOUT

Community doesn't make the cut for a sixth season

MELINDA TAUB

Metro World News

The drama behind the scenes on beleaguered NBC sitcom Community was always nearly as compelling as the jokes onscreen. Perennially low-rated, Community faced cancellation every year for its five seasons. Now the scrappy little show that could finally can't: NBC gave it the axe last week.

The show's obsessive fans won't give up at such a minor setback, however. Fans have already begun petitioning production company Sony to shop Community to other networks.

But the plan won't work unless the most important fan of all, creator/showrunner Dan Harmon, is onboard, and he sounds decidedly unenthused.

"[W]hen Sony called me on Friday with the news, there was brief discussion at the end of the call about the concept of the show living elsewhere, and I was definitely in the 'eh' column," he writes on his blog.

"For a million reasons, some selfish, some creative, one logistic, five sexual, three racist (in a good way) and, oddly, nine isometric."

Seriously though, whence Harmon's "eh?" Apparently, he's starting to feel like Kickstarter culture is placing an unfair burden on fans. "If you want to know the God's honest truth, part of my 'eh' was coming from the unsettling thought of your passion for campaigns being once again exploited by this rather unfair, somewhat backward system, one that now treats you like it's your responsibility to keep a show alive, like a corporation is doing you a favour by feeding you low-grade opiate through a regulated tube. Like you owe them an apology when they can't measure or monetize you to their satisfaction," Harmon writes.

Harmon says his enthusiasm will probably return next week, but he thinks that neither his nor fans' gumption will make much of a difference this time. I hope it does; I'd love to see a Community episode centered around fan campaigns.

Introduction to Crowdfunding, perhaps?

Ben Affleck GETTY IMAGES

Ben's gambling Garners negative attention from Jennifer

Ben Affleck is developing quite a reputation in Las Vegas, with several casinos accusing the Argo star of card counting — and his wife, Jennifer Garner, is less than thrilled, according to Star magazine. "Jen demanded to go to Vegas with Ben because she doesn't trust him, and he felt like he had no choice but to take her," a source says of the couple's visit last month that didn't end well for Affleck. "But after their dinners there each night, she would go back to their suite while Ben would stay out all night playing cards, betting thousands of dollars at a time. It makes Jen so mad, but once Ben starts gambling he can't stop." Until the casino intervenes, at least. And the source claims that when Affleck was busted by the Hard Rock Hotel & Casino, Garner was by his side: "She looked totally bored and annoyed," the source says.

Solange Knowles GETTY IMAGES

She may be young, but she's ready to throw down

In an exclusive video from TMZ.com, you can see Beyoncé's sister, Solange Knowles, viciously attacking Jay-Z in an elevator after the Met Ball. A man who appears to be Jay-Z's bodyguard holds the swinging and kicking Knowles back, but she makes contact with the Hova at least three times. For her part, Beyoncé just kind of stands there.

The video was taken by a surveillance camera in the elevator of the Standard Hotel after the big gala on May 4th during an after party. As TMZ.com points out, the bodyguard stops the elevator at one point, probably in hopes of keeping this private affair private.

Too late.

Looks can be deceiving — even when it comes to boredom

Why do we get bored?
One professor weighs in

KIERON MONKS

Metro World News in New York City

You might think it's your fault you're dozing off in a classroom or office, but that's not always the case.

There are clear categories of boredom triggered by one's environment, says pioneering researcher Dr. Thomas Goetz from the University of Konstanz in Germany (see sidebar).

What is the most common misconception about boredom?

It's important to recognize the different types, and clearly define the differences.

You say apathetic boredom is the worst — how bad can it get?

The problem is that it makes every experience negative and the potential for arousal is low. You can't do anything against this state and it can become a big problem related to depression.

What puts us at risk?

Some people tend to a specific state but only to a small degree; each experience is based on situations. It's important that people recognize the forms. Often the problem is a lack of freedom, such as at school. Teachers should be aware and try to find individualized methods that give students choice.

Is there a risk that teaching

Researchers believe there are five types of boredom. ISTOCK boredom could cause more boredom?

There is an argument from anxiety research that awareness increases the problem, but in this case it is about knowing and realizing, and this goes hand in hand with resolving it.

What follow-up research is needed?

We didn't measure the effects. We need diagnostic instruments to show the experiences of boredom.

Types of boredom

Here are the various categories.

- Indifferent boredom. A relaxing, possibly positive type — "a general indifference to, and withdrawal from, the external world."

- Calibrating boredom. Wandering thoughts — "general openness to behaviours aimed at changing the situation."

- Searching boredom. "Actively seeking out specific ways of minimizing feelings of boredom."

- Reactant boredom. Causes sufferers "to leave the boredom-inducing situation and avoid those responsible for this situation (e.g., teachers)."

- Apathetic boredom. Impossible to break from this mode — "dangerous, similar to depression."

Fanshawe programs offer flexible options

Continuing education enhances career path

Fanshawe College knows going back to school is not always easy.

To accommodate the needs of more students, Fanshawe is evolving their program offerings to be more flexible.

"At Fanshawe College we recognize people have busy lives," says Devin Robinson, manager of student recruitment at Fanshawe College.

"We want to provide educational options that can enhance your current experience, train you for a new career or allow you to explore talents you haven't unleashed before, all in a way that fits your schedule and meets your needs," Robinson says.

Fanshawe College has over 200 continuing education programs to choose from, with a variety of learning formats for students, including in-class, blended, online, accelerated and weekend classes.

These formats are designed to meet the needs of students by providing flexible study options.

To assist students in getting on the right track, support at Fanshawe College starts long before classes begin.

A team of admissions and pathways advisors can assist people by reviewing their previous education and work experience to find the programs that are the best fit for them.

Registered students gain access to a variety of different counselling and advising resources that serve as powerful tools to ensure success.

Even after graduation students have access to the college's career services support system for assistance with resumés and interview skills, while also tapping into job listings specifically for graduates.

Robinson says these services have proven to be a ticket to success, with 86 per cent of Fanshawe graduates finding work within six months of graduation.

"We provide them with a direct connection to employment-ready skills, flexible learning opportunities and knowledgeable faculty who are industry experts," says Bruce Smith, senior manager, business, industry and community services at Fanshawe. Visit fanshawec.ca/adult.

A career in interior decorating awaits...

Westervelt College graduates have many doors open for them

For those who have always had a creative flair for decorating, Westervelt College's interior decorating program can help you put your creativity to work.

This beautiful career has gained plenty of media attention over the past few years, with more and more home and garden design shows popping up on television and more people taking interest in the presentation of their homes or workplaces.

This six-month diploma program will help students learn how to recreate and reinvigorate interior residential and commercial spaces from just an ordinary room, to something extraordinary.

Interior decorating has inspired a variety of different careers, and Westervelt students will be prepared to step into the area of their choosing.

"Students who graduate from the interior decorating program have a variety of employment opportunities that they are qualified to work," says Tracey de Rond, of graduate employment services at Westervelt College.

Students find employment in high-end furniture stores as decorating consultants, in kitchen design firms, flooring and window-covering stores, and paint stores where they have an opportunity to do in-home consultations for customers.

Some graduates have found work with

GAIN INDUSTRY KNOWLEDGE, SKILLS

Throughout the interior decorating program, students will learn about:

- colour co-ordination reading and drawing floor plans
- creating perspectives
- conceptualizing and producing aesthetic and functional design
- the ability to decorate both residential and commercial spaces
- retail selling skills
- space-planning technology

home builders and act as the in-house interior decorator, and assist clients with all of their design choices in the building process.

"A number of our graduates have taken on the challenge of starting their own design business and have become quite successful," says de Rond.

Westervelt's interior decorating program is endorsed by the Canadian Decorators' Association (CDECA) and is taught by an instructor who has over 20 years of experience.

She is well recognized by the industry and is former president of the Association of Registered Interior Designers of Ontario.

Applications for the May 26 start date of the interior decorating program are now being accepted and space is limited.

Mary had a little lamb

NUTRI-BITES
Theresa Albert
DHN, RNCPT
myfriendinfood.com

Mary had a little lamb, because the meat is moist and rich and satisfying, and a little lamb is all you need. Bahaha. OK, that's enough.

Delicious lamb is raised in Canada and is generally a local, grass-fed food.

That said, if you don't check the label, you are more than likely enjoying an imported product from New Zealand.

Lamb leg or rump can be a little higher in fat and calories but it has all of the benefits of other animal meats like protein, B12 and zinc.

Lamb chops are generally a quick-cooking, leaner option and a nice change.

There is a slightly gamey flavour to lamb that can be an acquired taste but chops are generally milder. For newbies, sweet flavours like mint or raspberry are great compliments to minimize the grassiness.

The trick for cooking lamb chops is to be sure to preheat the grill to a very high heat but to only cook each chop for three or four minutes per side.

The protein is delicate and the meat is thin, so chops don't need much attention to be tender and delicious.

Let the chops rest for a few minutes before serving so that all of the juices remain within the meat.

Gunnarsson and Bernier on the mend after surgeries: Leafs

Both goalie Jonathan Bernier and defenceman Carl Gunnarsson have undergone successful surgeries and should be fully recovered by September in time for training camp, the Maple Leafs announced Monday.

Bernier was treated for a sports hernia, which put him on the injured list twice, while Gunnarsson had his hip repaired. That has bothered him for two seasons.

"Both are progressing well," the Leafs said in a news release.

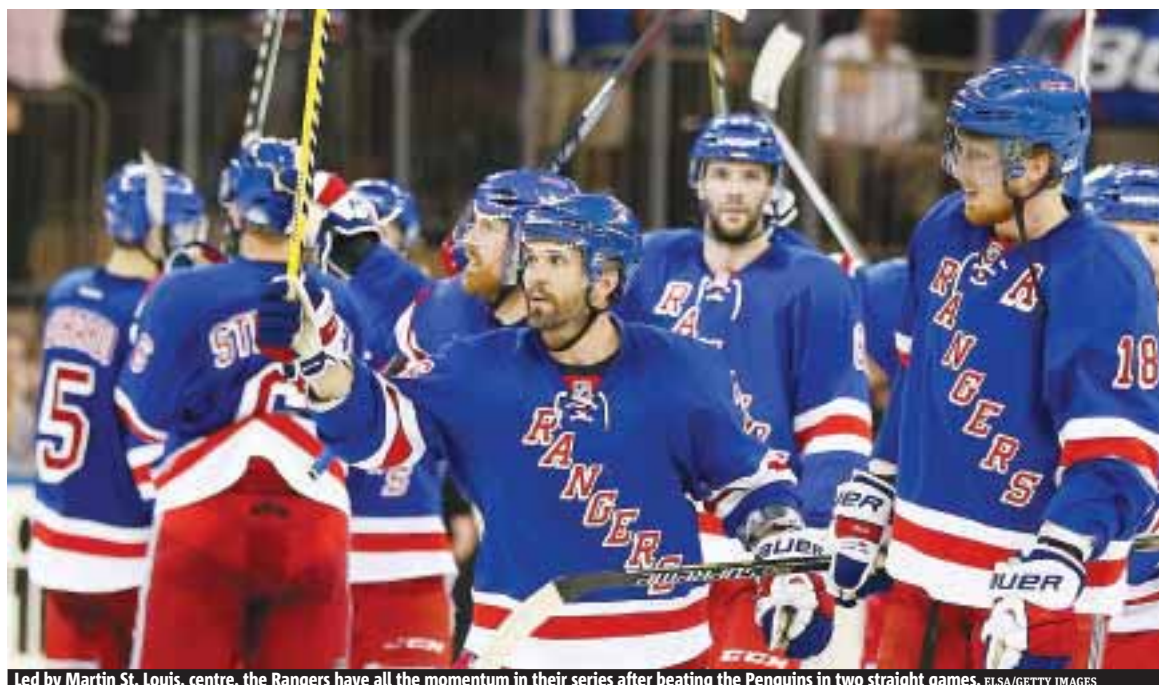

The Maple Leafs said the surgeries occurred at the end of the season, but the team did not provide a date. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Redblacks likely to keep first overall pick: GM

While Ottawa Redblacks general manager Marcel Desjardins has entertained some offers for his first overall pick in the CFL draft, he says there's a "relatively good chance" he'll make the pick Tuesday night.

Desjardins says he knows who he wants to take first overall but is keeping it to himself. One player the Redblacks won't use the top pick on is McGill tackle Laurent Duvernay-Tardif, the top-ranked CIS prospect who was selected in the sixth round of the NFL draft Saturday by the Kansas City Chiefs. THE CANADIAN PRESS

New York carries momentum into Game 7 against Pittsburgh

The New York Rangers have momentum, a unified locker-room and Henrik Lundqvist.

The Pittsburgh Penguins have two of the world's best players and a coach who could be needing a win to keep his job.

No pressure or anything, just a Game 7 that could alter the long-term future of one of the NHL's most stable franchises and boost the immediate prospects of an emotionally charged group rallying around one of the game's most respected veterans.

Looking overmatched and overwhelmed while falling behind 3-1 to the Penguins four games into the Eastern Conference semifinals, it's the Rangers who head to Game 7 on Tuesday night looking like the team ready to move on.

Martin St. Louis, just days removed from the death of his mother, scored the first of New York's three goals in Game 6 to provide the jolt that carried the Rangers all the way back from the brink.

The way St. Louis figures it, he is simply repaying the guys in a dressing room he's still learning after arriving in New York after a trade with Tampa Bay in February.

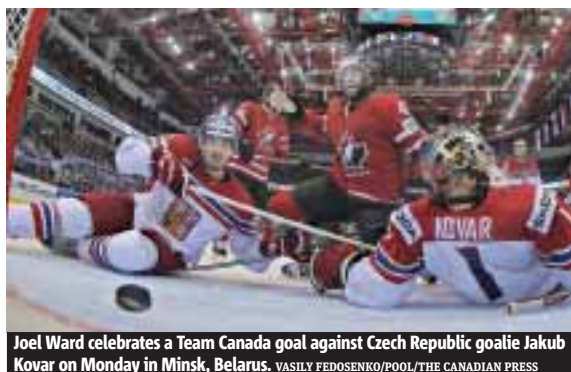

"I think when something like that happens to one person to see the support you get from everybody else, it really makes it real," he said. "There's not phoniness about the family feeling you want to create."

Meanwhile, Lundqvist was New York's best player early in the series, the main reason 3-2, 2-0 and 3-0 losses didn't look worse.

When it looked as if the Rangers were out of it after falling behind 3-1, he responded by stopping 67 of the next 69 shots he faced and is 9-2 with a 1.35 goals-against average with the Rangers facing elimination. The three-time All-Star is 4-1 in Game 7. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Canada makes Czechs pay for major penalty

Canadian captain Kevin Bieksa had a fat lip but it was worth it.

Canada scored twice on a five-minute major penalty to Jan Kovar for slashing Bieksa, which was enough to build a lead that stood up for a 4-3 victory over the Czech Republic at the world hockey championship on Monday.

Joel Ward, Kyle Turris, Nathan MacKinnon and Morgan Rielly scored for the Canadians, who won their second straight game to improve to 2-0-1 at the tournament. They moved to the top of Group A with seven points.

It looked like the three points would come easily, even after Canada gave up the first goal of the game to Roman Cervenka. But Czech goals by Jiri Novotny and Tomas Hertl midway through the third period made things a little too close for comfort at Chizhovka-Arena.

Canada was able to hold on because of what they did in the second, when MacKinnon and Rielly scored 17 seconds apart on the power play.

James Reimer, tested with 13 shots in the first period while his teammates mustered just four, was stellar in picking up his first victory of the tournament with 31 saves.

Czech starter Jakub Kovar gave up four goals on 13 shots before getting pulled late in the second period. Alexander Salak punched Alex Burrows in the head only seconds after he entered, but he wasn't a factor much of the rest of the way.

Defoe on standby list for Brazil

Age and geography probably played against Toronto FC striker Jermain Defoe in his bid to go to the World Cup in Brazil.

The 31-year-old Defoe did not make England's main 23-man squad which features Wayne Rooney, Daniel Sturridge, Danny Welbeck and Rickie Lambert at forward. Instead the MLS star was one of two strikers named to England's seven-man standby list.

The first-team England strike force has combined for 51 international goals and 124 caps in Rooney (38 goals, 89 caps), Sturridge (3, 10), Welbeck (8, 21) and Lambert (2, 4).

Manager Roy Hodgson also has attacking options in midfield in Alex Oxlade-Chamberlain, Adam Lallana, Ross Barkley, Raheem Sterling, among others.

"Jermain Defoe's international career could be over," the Daily Telegraph said after the squad announcement.

Homophobic tweets at Sam's draft backfire

SportsCenter boycott.

Former Ole Miss guard said ESPN coverage of Michael Sam's draft was inappropriate

Former Mississippi basketball player Marshall Henderson says ESPN's coverage of Michael Sam becoming the first openly gay player drafted by the NFL was inappropriate and that he is boycotting SportsCenter.

Henderson took to Twitter Monday morning using expletives to say that he would not watch the show until the network stopped running the Sam footage, adding "... My brothers are 7 and 11 and saw that!!!"

After a flurry of backlash, Henderson sent another tweet less than an hour later saying "Im sorry, but I DO NOT AGREE WHATSOEVER that should be shown to where innocent eyes can see!!!"

The comments drew a quick and sharp rebuke from Ole Miss athletic director Ross Bjork, who said on Twitter he's "extremely disappointed & we do not condone the statements by our former bball player."

Later Bjork added: "We use significant resources to educate our student-athletes about respect & dignity for all people & unfortunately not everyone gets it."

Henderson later sent out a string of tweets that attempted to explain his comments. He said a friend who is a psychology major asked him to send the comments to see "how people react when others say things or act a certain way against another group of people."

Henderson, known for his long-range shooting, also is no stranger to controversy.

He arrived at Ole Miss after serving a short stint in jail following a probation violation and had a run-in with Oxford, Miss., police last summer that was part of the reason for a three-game suspension. He was also reprimanded by the NCAA in 2013 after an outburst following the team's loss to La Salle in the NCAA tournament.

Henderson wasn't the only prominent athlete to face criticism because of a disparaging tweet regarding Sam, who kissed his boyfriend after learning he'd been drafted by the St. Louis Rams on Saturday.

Miami Dolphins safety Don Jones was fined an undisclosed amount and will undergo educational training after he tweeted "OMG" and "Horrible" shortly after Sam's name was announced.

Jones apologized for his comments Sunday and described them as inappropriate. The Dolphins said Jones has been excused from all team activities until he completes training related to his comments.

Elbow strain puts Santos out

The Toronto Blue Jays put reliever Sergio Santos on the 15-day disabled list Monday with a right elbow strain.

Santos, 30, has appeared in 14 games this season, posting an 0-2 record with five saves and a 9.00 earned-run average.

Toronto also optioned catcher Eric Kratz to triple-A Buffalo while recalling infielder Jonathan Diaz and right-hander Chad Jenkins.

Kratz, 33, hit .231 in 11 games with Toronto this season.

Diaz, 29, appeared in 22 games before being optioned April 30.

Jenkins, 26, returns for a third time this season.

'This isn't Hollywood.' Glitz won't get Manziel off the Browns' bench

Johnny Manziel has a Heisman Trophy, celebrity friends and fame. At the moment though, he doesn't have a starting job.

Cleveland owner Jimmy Haslam said Monday the Browns told Johnny Football to start acting like a backup quarterback.

Although Manziel has brought a buzz to Cleveland and made the Browns fashionable, Haslam quickly ended any speculation that he'll soar past Brian Hoyer.

"We were very frank with him that 'You're the backup quarterback. This is a hardworking, blue-collar town. This isn't Hollywood,'" Haslam said.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

You have started many new things in recent weeks but you will soon have to choose which one or two projects you are going to focus on. There's no point trying to do it all.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

With the Sun moving through your birth sign you are eager to start something new. Don't wait for Lady Luck to drop opportunities into your lap — get out there and create them yourself.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

Everyone has daydreams but the power of your imaginings could lead you in some unusual directions. Try to keep a grip on reality today, otherwise your mind could float away!

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Work hard but leave yourself time for fun too. Friends will come by when you least expect it and you should be ready to drop what you are doing and make them feel welcome.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

You will be extraordinarily assertive on the work front, but you could also annoy people who think you are trying to usurp their position. You must stay on good terms with those in positions of power.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

You will find that a number of questions you have been asking over the past few weeks will answer themselves. Whether or not the answers are to your liking, at least you will know what it all means.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

Fears you thought had been put behind you will return in unexpected ways. However, if you face up to those fears and deal with them bravely the planets indicate this will be the very last time they bother you.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

The next few days are mainly about relationships. Challenges must be dealt with and certain people must be told in no uncertain terms that you are the boss. Compromise is possible, but only after you establish your authority.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

If you need to make changes in your working environment now is the time. Some of your colleagues won't like what you do but that's too bad. Either they fit in with your plans or they move out.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

This is one of the best times of the year for you and you really should be making the most of it. Most things are possible, so set your sights high and make greatness your goal.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

A difference of opinion with a friend or family member could get out of hand, so promise yourself no matter what is said you won't overreact. Soon all will be forgotten.

Pisces

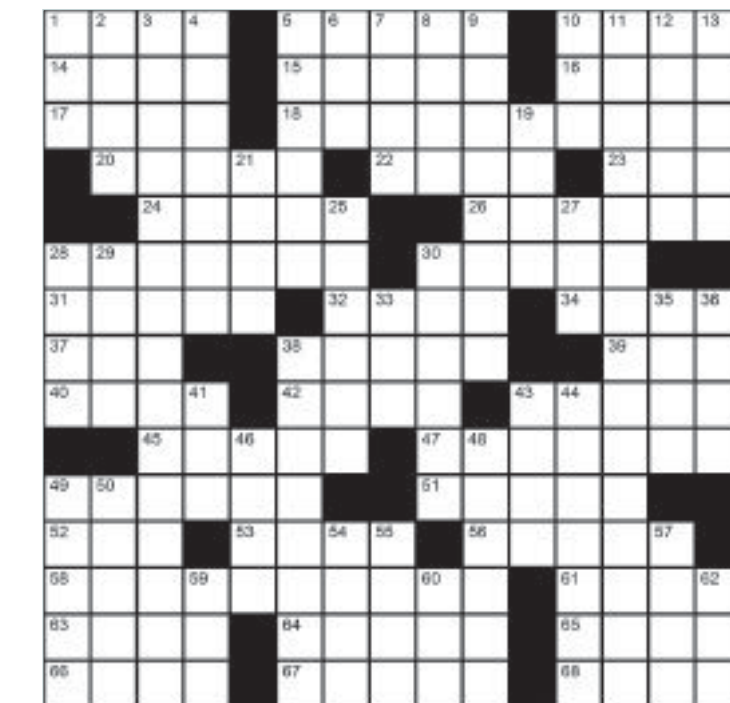

Feb. 20 - March 20

Travel is on the cards but so are hold-ups and unexpected diversions. Wherever you end up you'll have a lot of fun, so don't stay home — get out into the world. SALLY BROMPTON
